Description: Bryn McCamley and Laureen Sutton contacted us in 2011, shortly after they had acquired Ashland Institute of Massage (AIM). They had a clear vision for the school and wanted to put their own mark on the institution. As their website states:

A small school with a big vision, Ashland Institute of Massage offers a holistic approach to the education of body, mind, and heart. At AIM, who you are is as important as what you learn. Our AIM is for you to acquire awareness, integrity, and meaning in your studies, practices, and lives.

We worked closely with AIM to develop a brand-new visual identity—including logo/tagline/wordmark variations, colors, typography, and photography guidelines—as well as a wide range of publications, ads, and signage. Curves were incorporated into design elements to echo the curves of a body and evince the gentle, healing power of touch. From the outset, we involved photographer Rory Finney in the discussions so he was aware of the visual identity and goals for their new branding, which he reflected through authentic portraiture and action shots capturing AIM's compassionate, rigorous instruction. We also created a website reflecting the freshly established graphic identity. We continue to work closely with AIM to fulfill their publication, website, and other creative needs.

In 2015, the tagline third prong changed from "mastery" to "meaning," and we updated the logo variations accordingly.

Affiliate Organization: When AIM launched Chrysalis Massage Clinic, Bryn and Laureen contracted us to design a new logo capturing the concept of chrysalis while also incorporating the heart imagery central to their mission to educate the "body, mind, and heart"). We established a new visual identity that would distinguish Chrysalis while wedding nicely with the AIM look and feel. Typography and design elements such as watermark ornaments and assymetrically leaf-shaped photos reinforced the affiliate relationship between Chrysalis and Ashland Institute of Massage.

Comments by Laureen & Bryn:

- "Thanks so much for doing great creative work for us! Hiring you in the very beginning was one of the best things we did to get ourselves up and running. I still LOVE our branding and website. You did such an amazing job interpreting who we are into a beautiful visual look!"
- "We were perusing websites of other massage schools in Oregon earlier today and appreciating ours all the more. Thank you for designing and helping us create something we are so proud of."
- "Thank you again for doing such lovely work for us and interpreting who we are so well for the public. I love the image we have developed together. Feels just right."
- "And have we told you how much we LOVE our new cards?! They were a total hit with our clients all weekend, sure to bring in more business."
- "SO GOOD!! You are the best news of the week!"
